Albert Fall Denied Suspension of Term In Federal Prison

Former Secretary Is Not Immediately Sentenced by Justice

RE-HEARING MONDAY

The Attorney General Is to Designate Prison Is Report

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Albert B. Fall, Saturday was denied a suspension of his one year jail term, but Justice Balley in the District of Columbia Supreme Court did not immediately order the former interior secretary to jail.

Justice Balley said he would entertain a motion to add a day to the year given to Fall and wanted to pass on the matter next Monday.

If a day is added the attorney general may designate the prison, not Fall's attorney.

Frank Hogan, attorney for Mr. Fall, said he would consult his client regarding this proposed modification.

2 Youths Drown While Swimming

Lawson Churchill and Walter Kaufman Lose Lives in River

RUSSELLVILLE—Two youths members of a swimming party, drowned in Holla Bend bottoms in the Arkansas river about 6 Friday afternoon. Lawson Churchill, a son of J. J. Churchill of Hector, and Walter Kaufman, aged 12, son of Green Kaufman, also of Hector. The drowning occurred about 10 miles northeast of Russellville.

The youths were swimming with friends and relatives, when they became exhausted and shouted for help. Green Kaufman went to their assistance, but the current swept the boys away before he reached them.

The body of Kaufman was recovered about two hours later by Lyle Hill, son of County Judge J. Q. Hill. Searching parties, working in relays, were diving and dragging the river late Friday night in an effort to recover Churchill's body.

To Dispatch Mail Planes By Radio

Permit Is Granted for Station to Be Operated at Little Rock Airport

WASHINGTON—A construction permit was granted Friday by the Federal Radio Commission to Aeromarital Radio, Inc., to operate at Little Rock on 400 watts power, unlimited time.

The company will use frequencies ranging from 2,326 to 6,275 kilocycles; being granted the use of nine frequencies without restriction and four restricted to daylight hours.

LITTLE ROCK.—The permit received by Aeromarital Radio, Inc., which is a subsidiary of American Airways, is for a private commercial station to be operated at the Little Rock Municipal Airport for dispatching mail planes.

Fred Studebaker, radio engineer for American Airways, has been in Little Rock several weeks supervising installation of the radio equipment. It will be a voice station used exclusively for communication between airport stations and between ports and planes. It will operate on a band that will not interfere with amateur stations, nor can it be heard over regular radio receiving sets.

Poland's Tribute to Woodrow Wilson

In tribute to the memory of America's war-time President, this large statue of Woodrow Wilson—shown here in a picture taken just before its recent unveiling—has been erected in a public square in Poznan, Poland. It is the gift of Ignacy Jan Paderewski, world-famed pianist and Polish statesman, and of the late Gustaw Borgeski, who is seen standing at extreme right at the base of the statue.

Hope Furniture Co. Nine Pilots Still Escapes Robbery

Coin-Box in Cash Register Broken, But Thieves Are Frightened Off

Robbers who forced the front door of the Hope Furniture company store at Third and Main streets were frightened off by the arrival of R. V. Herndon, one of the proprietors, about 9:15 o'clock Friday night.

The front door was found open, and police and the proprietors made an immediate search of the building.

No loss was sustained, Mr. Herndon said. The robbers had broken the coin box on the cash register, but apparently left in too great haste to obtain their loot.

A traveling salesman who had accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Herndon to the picture show Friday night, lost his coat, which had been left in the store near the cash register.

Great excitement prevailed on South Main while the robbers were still supposed to be in the building, a large crowd gathered outside. However, the intruders apparently escaped from the rear or side entrance.

Clark County to Plant Strawberries

Large Acreage Is Planned in All Sections of the County

ARKADELPHIA.—At least 500 acres of strawberries are in prospect for Arkadelphia and its vicinity, according to officials of the Chamber of Commerce.

The prospective new strawberry growers have observed the success of a few scattering fields near the city during the past several years and know what can be accomplished in this line. There are large areas both east and west of Arkadelphia said to be adaptable to strawberries.

Chamber of Commerce officials and a committee appointed for investigation of costs, yields, prices, etc., have been gathering data which is being in turn given to farmers who are interested. It is believed by the leaders that by next year there will be a large commercial crop raised and that car load shipments will be a daily occurrence during the season.

Humanity's Plight In Event of Another War Is Discussed

Prime Minister MacDonald Principal Speaker at Peace Meeting

MANY AT HEARING

Delegates to Conferences Will Urge Peace Among Nations

LONDON.—(AP)—A dire picture of humanity's plight in the event of another war was drawn by Prime Minister MacDonald at a mammoth peace meeting Saturday afternoon.

A great Armageddon struggle would come at last and the end of it would not be defeat but uniformity of exhaustion. Mankind would be almost entirely wiped out.

He said that the British delegates going to the disarmament meeting next year were determined by appeals, to pledges and to common sense to persuade all nations to reduce "this enormous and disgraceful burden."

An early party meeting was interrupted by the bursting of several stench bombs thrown by women.

Because he doesn't like the way the administration is running things—particularly in the matter of prohibition power and farm relief—ex-Senator Joseph I. Dave Finn, a negro employed by the Hope Lumber company, held the insurance, but changed the original beneficiary, so that the money would be paid to Charley and Martha Walker.

The executor of the estate, A. B. Finin, filed an intervention, and minor heirs also interposed, which, with attorneys for the beneficiaries, made a three-cornered court fight.

The vote on the resolution favoring the shut down was 13 for and 13 against.

Architects Protest

Plans For Building

Consideration of Protest Is Urged by Senator Robinson

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Little Rock architects do not think plans for the new $1,500,000 federal building are up to the standard of other public buildings here and have sent a resolution of protest to the treasury department.

In the effort to have the plans revised, the architects enlisted the support of United States Senator Joe T. Robinson and Congressman Heartless Ragon. Senator Robinson sent a telegram to James A. Wetmore, supervising architect of the treasury department, asking consideration of the protest.

The protest came after a photograph of the proposed building appeared in a Little Rock newspaper.

Few buildings will be built here within the next 10 to 20 years which will cost more than $1,000,000, the architects said, and the federal building should be a model of architectural design.

"Any one who has studied the pub"lished design," the protest said, "must feel as we do, that sufficient study was not given to the design; that the building as shown will detract from rather than add to the beauty of our city and that it is neither expressive of the dignity of its purpose nor of the spirit of a progressive community."

The protest, signed by 15 of the 13 members of the profession here, said no architect expected any financial gain from a change in plans.

An entire block on a principal street has been cleared of buildings and the site is ready for preliminary construction work.

Toward the middle of August, the new plebes will take a five day practice march through the foothills of the Catskills, southwest of West Point. During the march they will live in shelter tents and eat from rolling kitchens.

The academic year will open September 1st. Classroom work will start at 8 a. m. and will extend until 3 p. m., with an hour's intermission for lunch. Drills and compulsory intra-mural athletics will take up another hour in the afternoon. For the academic work the class will be divided into sections of from ten to fourteen cadets and each man will be required to recite in each subject every day.

This fall Lemley will leave West Point on three occasions, accompanying the Corps of Cadets to New Haven for the Yale football game, to Pittsburgh for the University of Pittsburgh game and to New York City for the Notre Dame game. His first leave of absence will be granted on December 23, 1931, when he will receive a ten day Christmas leave.

Woman Tourist Injured Fatally in Car Crash

PARIS, Ark.—(AP)—Mrs. A. J. Peacock, 46, of Little Rock, was fatally injured Friday and Mrs. James Brady, 32, also of Little Rock was seriously injured when a car in which they were passengers overturned near here on highway 22. The party was en route from Little Rock to Fort Smith on a vacation visit with the relatives.

Chancellor Confirms Title to Land With Arkansas Bank

INSURANCE DISPUTE

Negro Heirs and Beneficiaries in Three-Cornered Argument

The $121,000 suit of E. C. Brown et al against the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. for certain farm lands claimed by the stockholders of the old Hempstead County Bank & Trust Co., was dismissed on the plaintiffs' motion Friday in Hempstead chancery court at Washington, Chancellor C. E. Johnson presiding.

A counter-suit was filed by State

Bank Commissioner Walter E. Taylor and the liquidating agent for the Arkansas bank, W. S. Atkins, seeking to confirm title to the farm lands in the name of the bank now in process of liquidation.

A Thought

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.—Thomas Jefferson.

Robinson, Watson and Underwood

SENATOR ROBINSON told the newspapers Friday that when congress convenes next December he will ask for a reduction in tariff rates.

His statement was in reply to a challenge from Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, daring him to take this step.

"Senator Watson," said Mr. Robinson, "is the same Republican leader who on the floor of the Senate just before the Simon-Hawley bill passed declared its enactment would cause the return of prosperity to the United States within thirty days."

But prosperity didn't come back. Senator Watson probably defends his prophecy on the ground that he had been saying the same thing after each new tariff increase for the last ten years—and this was the first time he was wrong.

By the same token, the Democratic leader has been a prophet living in the wilderness for the last ten years—and this is the first time he has been recognized as right.

But what does controversy profit us, when circumstances seem always to determine the issue?

Senator Watson stands convicted of being a poor statesman for following each tariff revision with a new and more outrageous increase, simply because the last one had brought larger profits. A statesman treasures the favorable trade-wind against the storm that is yet to come. Yet Senator Watson made of himself a creature of circumstance, with no thought of tomorrow.

And our own Senator Robinson deserves nearly as much censure as the Republican chief. Mr. Robinson and all the other Democratic leaders in 1928 assured us that the tariff issue was dead. This hardly was statesmanship. The Democratic leadership had broken down so utterly before the performance of Republican prosperity that we were asked to believe the tariff issue would never rise again.

We are not critical of the Democratic chiefs, except in comparison with the party leaders who immediately preceded them and before whom they must stand in judgment. We are thinking in particular of the late Oscar Underwood, Alabama congressman and senator, whose position as "the last of the Free Traders" did not prevent him from understanding the perpetual nature of the tariff dispute.

Mr. Underwood had a definite idea about the tariff—and for wisdom in this matter we would recommend that our modern Democrats read up on this man who, while he opposed every principle behind the Republican high tariff, yet understood it and conceded that it ought to be recognized by proper regulation.

The secret of proper control of the American tariff must lie in a fact-finding tariff board, absolutely independent of interested industries. Mr. Underwood believed. In his book "Drifting Sands of Party Politics," he writes:

"This body would be intrusted with finding the facts in regard to our domestic production and consumption, and the volume of imports and exports of merchandise.... This information would be valuable both when the congress was writing a protective tariff bill and when it was writing a revenue bill.... The value to the congress in writing a protective tariff bill would be the fact that, as a rule, the members of congress would have confidence in the work of their own organization.... and when the interested manufacturers and producers appeared before the Ways and Means Committee in an effort to make out a case favorable to a protective tariff tax for their particular industry, the committee would have independent figures and facts to check against the statements made to them by people who came with a biased viewpoint."

Mr. Underwood lived through a generation of ups and downs in American economic life. Though he died in January, 1929, nine months before the greatest stock market crash in our history, he knew by precept what was to follow in fact—which is something our modern statesmen in both parties seem to have neglected.

With unerring finger Mr. Underwood has stated the simplest truth possible: That when the government is extending protection to billion-dollar industries it needs an independent fact-finding body to check against the facts presented to congress by special interests.

The Republicans, stoking the tariff ship for all it was worth from 1920 to 1929, finally blew it up. We have every reason to suppose that if there had been one iota of statesmanship in either party, a fact-finding tariff body would have been established to show the distinct peril in which we stood with each successive increase.

Mr. Underwood's proposal still stands before the country as the most valuable contribution to the tariff question; and the Democratic leaders ought to push it through into legislative enactment this December.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
REA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Some people can have a doctor's care without any doctor bills.

Not very many, it is true, but the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care located some community experiments of the sort which it considered worthy of exhaustive study.

Thirty-one communities in two Canadian provinces have employed community physicians to treat their citizens and one large American shoe company for more than 10 years has provided free medical care for its 15,000 employees and their dependents with a medical department employing 100 persons.

The reports of the committee's experts indicate that both experiments have been carried out with more than a satisfactory degree of success. The reports are especially interesting because of the attention modern day zoologists are paying to the inequalities of illness and the committee's attack on the problem of reasonable costs of medical service for its recipients.

Might Try It Here

In Saskatchewan and Manitoba—mostly in the former province—31 rural communities now have community doctors. These rural communities resemble our counties being about 18 miles square. The community doctor system is 10 years old and it may be applicable to some communities in the United States in view of a recognized tendency for physicians to concentrate in cities because of unsatisfactory incomes obtainable in rural areas.

The system has grown in Saskatchewan partly because of complaints of excessive medical costs and insufficient service in rural areas and partly because of the difficulty in persuading physicians to enter private practice where returns were very low. Sometimes local physicians have demanded that they be hired by the community if the community wanted them to stay.

Seven additional communities voted to hire a municipal doctor last December and not one of the 11 which have had a municipal doctor has abandoned the plan.

Each doctor has from 1000 to 1500 office calls annually and makes from 300 to 500 visits to the homes of his patients. The committee report finds that the average family expense for medical service of all kinds—including taxes for the physician's salary and any extra fees paid, drugs, nursing, and so on—is $20 a year.

Most municipal doctors say they are doing more work now than they would be if they were in private practice but that their income is greater, on the same amount of work than if they had to contend with bad debts.

General opinion among them is that the "contract" system does not interfere with the important personal relationship between doctor and patient and some of the physicians even admit that the annual salary helps intensify the doctor's interest in the patient's recovery.

It is also believed that the quality of preventive medical service has been considerably improved in the area served.

Physicians are eager for the positions and it is said that from 30 to 50 apply whenever one is open.

Gets $4000 Per Year

The average community served has a population of 1800 and the median salary of the Saskatchewan municipal doctor is about $4000.

He may or may not be permitted additional income from certain fees. He serves not only as a general practitioner to the rural municipality but also as the public health officer. In several communities besides the 31 the local physician is subsidized to the extent of $1500 or less in return for public health services and his care of indigent persons.

The reports of the committee's experts indicate that both experiments have been carried out with more than a satisfactory degree of success. The reports are especially interesting because of the attention modern day zoologists are paying to the inequalities of illness and the committee's attack on the problem of reasonable costs of medical service for its recipients.

Make Over 300 Visits

Convicts Build Memorial to Victims of Ohio Prison Fire

Convicts of the Ohio penitentiary have built this memorial fountain to the 320 prisoners who died in the Easter Monday fire.

COLUMBUS, O.—(AP)—From out of the Easter Monday fire at the Ohio penitentiary has risen a memorial fountain to the 320 convicts who perished.

It was designed by architects whose real names have been changed to numbers, and it likewise was built by the convicts themselves.

The new fountain, replaces an old one which has been damaged and dis-colored by winds and rain, and finally was blackened by the blaze that swept the "I" and "K" cell blocks in one of the most disastrous of prison fires.

"Imprisoned men dread drab surroundings," said Warden Thomas, "and they earnestly seek beauty. The fountain idea became popular."

Talk, Happiness

The world is bad enough without your wife. No path is wholly rough. Look for the places that are smooth and clear. And speak of those to rest the weary ear. Of earth, so hurt by one continuous strain. Of human discontent and grief and pain. Talk with the world is better off without your uttered ignorance and morbid doubt. If you have faith in God or man, or both. Say so; if not, push back upon the shelf. Of silence all your thoughts, 'till faith shall come; No one will grieve because your lips are dumb. Talk health, the dreary never changing life. Of mortal maladies is worn and stale. Say you are well or all is well with you. And God will hear your words and make them true. —E. W. W.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

W. A. Bowen, Pastor

Throughout the summer we will begin our Sunday School service at 9:30. Come on time.

Preaching service begins at 10:30 and closes at 11:30. Note this change in time. The evening service will be held on the church lawn at 8 o'clock.

We had the largest evening attendance last Sunday we have had for several months. Rev. Alonzo Cagle, a son of Arkansas, but at present pastor in Kentucky, is visiting in our city and will speak for us at the evening hour. We are sure his many friends will be glad to hear him preach. Pass the word on to others and let's have a great crowd and a great service.

could go your way, I think. And I'd be free."

"He was done all last, and still the young girl sat motionless, her great soft eyes full on his."

"He stirred impatiently. "You don't need to answer at once. Think it over," he urged.

Liane stood up. She was trembling now. "I never was so insulted in my life," she said, in a throaty voice.

She ran upstairs to find her mother weeping, the dreary, infinite weeping of the convalescent.

"We can't go on like this, staying here," Cass moaned to her inquiries.

"It worries me." Liane tried to soothe her. "Mrs. Cleespaugh wants us to stay. Please, please don't worry about it."

"It's far too much. It doesn't seem right to accept it," Cass protested.

"Darling, you're not to worry. The doctor said that's expressly just get well and then we'll talk finances."

"But I can't go on being a well, a pensioner," moaned Cass, raising herself on one thin, bare arm.

The young girl flushed and shrigged. But her attempts to change the subject were fruitless.

Cass was determined to be up and about. Only her weakened condition prevented her from struggling into her clothes and going back to join the company.

"It's not that she isn't supremely kind," Cass pursued, warming to the subject. "She is. And that makes me more uncomfortable than ever."

She began to weep again, the helpless, devastating tears of utter weakness. Instantly Liane was on her knees beside the bed. "Darling, you mustn't! It'll be all right. Honestly, you're torturing me like that," she told him.

He turned moody again. Strange, touchable young man! In a voice suddenly cold and expressionless he said, "Of course not. Sorry. I won't offend again."

Liane was too sensitive to the change in his mood, caught him up abruptly.

"Oh, but you misunderstood—I didn't mean—"

Cass said, "It's to be kept on a strictly business basis. Isn't that what you meant? Right. Sorry I transgressed."

Oh, well, she thought, if he's going to be mulish about it, let him! She stole a side glance at the mutinous profile.

"Let's see, could we break it to them in about three—say four weeks?" Cass asked a few moments later.

"That will be all right," Liane agreed.

"Well, how's for starting right now with a bit of dancing?" the young man wanted to know. He turned the dial and presently the throb and beat of a far-off dance orchestra entered the room.

He held out his arms. The young girl, after an instant's hesitation, slid into them. Ah, but she hadn't known he would dance like that! She had danced with Van Rohard and had loved it.

Cass twiddled the dial for a moment, then turned to her with an abrupt movement.

"Well, let's have it," he demanded. "Tell me what you really think of me. I know I was no end of a fool to have asked you what I did today. I ask your pardon."

The tune beat its insistent way into her brain as her steps lightly and fleetingly followed his, wove themselves into the pattern of the music. A singer broke in rausously:

"Moanin' low, my sweet man, I love you so. If you die, where'll I be?"

The irony of it, thought Liane Barrett. The irony of dancing to this particular tune with this particular man!

A's Defeat Yanks In 14-Inning Game

Gehrig Ties Score in 9th, But Earnshaw Holds Out For A's

Lou Gehrig's 22nd home run of the year, with Babe Ruth on first base, tied the score for the New York Yankees Friday and sent their game with the Athletics into extra innings. Ruth Walberg relinquished his pitching burden to George Earnshaw, and big George carried on to the 14th inning. Two Philadelphia runs in that frame steered the contest, giving victory to Philadelphia 8 to 6.

It was the sixth defeat for the Yankees out of their last seven extra-inning games.

In the National League, the St. Louis Cards took their third straight game from Cincinnati, 2 to 1, putting them four and a half games ahead of the New York Giants. The Boston Braves hammered Dazzy Vance in the eighth inning and defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers 4 to 3.

Robinson Is Asked for Party Stand on Tariff

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Sen. Smoot Thursday called upon Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, to explain his party's position on the tariff question.

The Utah Republican, for whom the Smoot-Hawley tariff act is named, called attention to a statement issued through the republican national committee, to a request by Robinson that President Hoover take steps to revise the tariff.

Hooks and Slides

Exclamations

THE heat had caught the customers in Brooklyn. With Uncle Robbie's Baldwin Boys finally finding themselves, the rabid roosters of Flatbush have gone berserk.

The other day Lefty O'Doul was called out on a close play at first base. Bottles flew at Umpire Clark and police ran hither and thither about the park quieting the uproar.

From the way the club has been playing, the Robins are bound for the top. With each step up the ladder, the fans of Flatbush grow wilder and wilder. After that bad start, if the club does win the flag, the customers will be bouncing pop bottles, etc. off one another's skulls and enjoying it.

Oh, Dear!

JOHN L. SULLIVAN arose weakly, dripping with his own gore, to shout, "Well, anyway, I'm glad the championship remains in America," after Corbett had beaten him into the ground. What would good old John have said about Schmeling-Stribling? Let's not go into that.

Poor Phil!

AFTER Phil Scott had been knocked cuckoo by Larry Gaines, he covered his ears with his gloves when leaving the ring so he would not hear his countrymen's disapprobation. And there were 40,000 people there. Imagine that!

Trouble, Trouble!

POOR Peck! It was a balmy summer's afternoon and a goodly crowd was there. In seven innings the Yankees had been able to squeeze in one unearned run off Willie Hudlin. In the last of the seventh, the Indians waxed rough and scurried across the dish with four markers. Going into the eighth inning

DID YOU KNOW THAT—DISCIPLINARIAN DAN
Howley the other day
sent Shortstop Durocher back to the hotel to finish out his nap when Leo Mc-Dowell reported to the Reds' manager
15 minutes late for duty.

Mickey Finn is one of the reasons why Brooklyn has been so bumptious of late. He is a descendant of Brian Horan, no less. According to Lefty O'Doul . . . once in the Pacific Coast League,
Duster Mullen, the old Cleveland star, said something that didn't sound just right to the ears of Mickey Finn. . . . Mickey dropped him once for luck. They carried the Duster out of there.

the score was 5 to 1, Cleveland.
Then one way and another two men got on base and Babe Ruth came to bat. A perfect spot for a homer. Hudlin tossed a slow
one. It landed far over in Lexington avenue. That made the score 5 to 4, still Cleveland.

With one out then, Manager Peckinpaugh yanked Hudlin and sent his big shot to the firing line.
Wesley Ferrell. They baited him here and there and everywhere.
He made a wild pitch and hit a batter. He never could get the side out. Finally he had to leave the game. The Yankees won, 9 to 5.

When he left the game the Cleveland customers gave vent to protracted boos. Were they booing Ferrell, who had just won a game the day before? Were they booing Peckinpaugh, who thought that in sending Ferrell to the front he was stopping what looked to be dangerous rally?
The life of a baseball manager is not a happy one.

Der Schmiling Schmeling

He was the title-holder before, but is a real champion now. So despite a swollen and discolored left eye, Max Sigmund Otto Schmeling was a happy warrior when he returned to New York from his 15-round battle with William L. Stribling in Cleveland. Joe Jacobs, left, manager of the German fighter, and Max Muchon, right, his trainer, were smiling to oars they escort their protege.
